WORKMAN STEPS BACK TO LET WILSON VOTE FIRST AT PRINCETON

Walks By His Former Homes Before Starting for Capital.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 22 -President Wilson came home to vote at the primary to-day. He reached the station here at 12.20, ten minutes earlier than he had been expected.

Mr. Wilson looked well. He seemed bright and cheerful and his face lived here in Princeton. A friend remarked that Washington seemed to be pretty good as a summer resort, judging from his condition. To this the President replied: "It's pretty fair, and it's not so ho as it is here, right now."

Mr. Wilson walked to Mercer Engine house, No. 8, where he cast Demgine house, No. 8, where he cast Dem-ocratic ballot No. 18. He shook hands with Chairman J. R. Drake and the other election officers. Charles Houston, a workman, was about to yote, but stepped aside to allow the President to vote first. Then, alone, except for the ever present secret service men, he started for a walk. He passed out Stockton street to Library Place and walked past the house he occupied with his family before he became President of Princeton University.

From there he headed toward the house on Cleveland Lane that he occupied after he was elected Governor. Those who saw the direction he took left him alone to recall memories of other days. other days.

The President left at 1.55 o'clock for Washington.
